三、克漏字測驗【請依照段落上下文意，選出最適當的答案】

第一篇：

We all experience misunderstandings occasionally. I had one recently that really taught me a lesson. My friend Parker was assigned as group leader for a project in chemistry class. We were 31 to create an acid-base reaction to launch a model rocket. Everyone in the group wanted the launch to go well, so we all had lots of idea to 32. However, Parker wouldn't listen to anyone else. He seemed really bossy and stubborn, which was out of character for him, and everyone got sick and tired of working with him.

33, I was angry at him, because I thought being chosen as group leader had just gone to his head. But soon I began to wonder what was going on with him when I noticed that he'd quickly leave school at the end of every day. Then one day, I was walking by the hospital after school when I saw Parker outside pushing his grandmother 34 a wheelchair. She looked really sick, and I immediately realized the 35 of Parker's weird behavior. This experience taught me that in the future, I should communicate more directly so that there would be no misunderstanding.

第二篇：

For centuries, people have wanted to be rich and famous. It used to be that this was hard to 36: the cost of publishing, producing music, or becoming a politician was prohibitive for most. However, the Internet Age has reduced costs 37. As a result, there are more ways than ever to 38 people themselves. For young people, the dream often centers around video. 39, many Generation Z or "GenZ" dream of becoming YouTubers. However, just like any other social media influencer, there is no age 40 to make an influence on any platform. While "influencers" do not always generate a positive impression on the general public, YouTubers have become public cultural icons.

(1)36. (1) pull off (2) pull up (3) put on (4) put in

四、閱讀測驗【請依照段落上下文意，選出最適當的答案】

第一篇：

Today it's my turn to give the weekly oral report. And the topic that Professor May has assigned me is the life of the poet Emily Dickinson. Compared to Whitman, whom we discussed last week, I found Emily Dickinson strikingly different. She seems in fact to be the complete opposite of Whitman in her life and in her work. I would like to share briefly with the class some of the essential facts of her biography. Emily Dickinson was born in 1830 in Amherst, Massachusetts, barely a decade after Whitman. In her early twenties, for a reason which still remains a mystery, she began to withdraw from ordinary contact with the world. For the remaining 30 years of her life, she was seldom seen outside her home. In this respect, she was quite unlike Whitman, who loved the great outdoors and was quite actively engaged in some outdoor activities. Emily Dickinson spent her solitary days corresponding with friends and writing hundreds of remarkable poems. Although she showed some of her poems to her family and sent some in letters to friends, only four were published in her lifetime. Most of her poems, almost 1,200 of them, were discovered in her home after she died in 1886. These poems established her as a major poet. Several modern critics consider her the greatest woman poet in the English language. Uh, that's about all I have. Now let's begin talking about Dickinson's "I'm Nobody," which Professor May assigned for today's discussion.

(4)41. Who is the speaker?

- (1) A teacher. (2) A poet. (3) An artist. (4) A student.

(2)42. What is the main topic of the report?

- (1) The poem "I'm nobody" (2) The life of Emily Dickinson
(3) A comparison of Whitman and Dickinson (4) Dickinson as the greatest woman poet

(2)43. How did Dickinson compare to Whitman?

- (1) Dickinson was 20 years younger than Whitman.
(2) Unlike Whitman, Dickinson spent much of her time alone at home.
(3) Dickinson wrote a lot to her friends, whereas Whitman did not.
(4) Both Dickinson and Whitman were great woman poets.

(3)44. What was the discussion topic of the previous class meeting?

- (1) Eighteenth-century poetry (2) A comparison of the two poets
(3) The life and poems of Whitman (4) The life and poems of Dickinson

(1)45. What will the class do at the end of the oral presentation?

- (1) They will discuss one of Dickinson's poems.
(2) The class will listen to another report.
(3) There will be a lecture by Professor May.
(4) There will be a Q/A session about poetry.

第二篇：

Did you know that as recently as a few generations ago, one of the most common forms of entertainment was listening to actors in radio dramas? During the 1930s, for example, radio audiences had to imagine the scenery, the action, and even the performers' physical appearance. Nowadays, modern acting comes in various forms and can be classified into three types: stage acting, television acting, and film acting.

Of the modern types of acting, the oldest form is stage acting. Plays, ranging from Shakespearean classics to more modern hits, are performed in large theaters and on small community stages. The same performance is repeated in stage acting, and the stage sets stay the same for each performance. Also, stage acting is "live," so using understudies or replacement actors is crucial. Because of this reason, many people say there is nothing more entertaining than watching actors performing live on the stage.

Television acting could be the best-known type of acting. This type of acting generally is done for television programs produced in a studio. The storylines change weekly as writers create new dialogs and scenes for the main characters. Actors come to work five days a week to rehearse their lines. Television scenes can be filmed repeatedly until the actors get them right. With TVs in practically every household, it is no wonder this is the most familiar form of acting.

Finally, there is film acting. Filming acting begins with a screenplay, which includes all the written information about the set and the actors' dialogs and grows into a movie. It can be filmed anywhere in the world. For instance, if the story takes place in Brazil, the film crew and actors go on location in that country to film. Because it is not a live performance, directors may request that an actor repeat a scene until they are happy with the results, which can mean much work for the actors.

Whichever form it takes—stage, television, or film—it is interesting to note that different forms of acting have unique characteristics. However, regardless of the acting one prefers, it is safe to say that audience members will continue to appreciate the craft of acting as long as it provides such enjoyable entertainment.

(4)46. What is the main point in the first paragraph?

- (1) The development of radio drama.
- (2) The popularity of modern performance.
- (3) The difference between modern acting and classical acting.
- (4) The three different types of modern acting.

(1)47. Which of the following statements is NOT true about stage acting?

- (1) The acting is often performed in movie theaters.
- (2) This type of performance was born before the other two types of acting.
- (3) Actors should repeat their performances.
- (4) The act is live.

(2)48. What are the main things that actors in a television acting do five days a week?

- (1) Performing live on stage
- (2) Rehearse and practice lines with others
- (3) Traveling to a new location for filming
- (4) Recording a live acting

(1)49. Why do actors have to do lots of work in film acting?

- (1) The director would ask them to shoot the same scene repeatedly.
- (2) They always shoot abroad.
- (3) They have too many dialogues to memorize.
- (4) They have to perform live on stage.

(2)50. What is the general topic of the passage?

- (1) Act like a TV Star
- (2) Facts on Acting
- (3) Shakespeare's Plays
- (4) Film Production
